Survivor R – Rheinmetall showcases the Survivor R tactical operations vehicle for police and security forces at EnforceTac 2017

Particularly in high-risk situations, law enforcement personnel have to be transported to the scene in safety; at other times, persons at risk have to be safely evacuated out of harm's way. In order to this, police forces need high-mobility, heavily protected special operations vehicles. On 1-2 March 2017 Rheinmetall will be on hand at EnforceTac in Nuremberg, showcasing the Survivor R tactical operations vehicle for law enforcement and security forces.

The Rheinmetall MAN Military Vehilces (RMMV) Survivor R is a compelling symbol of Rheinmetall's extraordinary expertise in the worlds of security and mobility. Developed in cooperation with Achleitner, a well-known maker of special vehicles, it is the perfect answer for robust law enforcement operations. Based on a high-performance 4x4 MAN truck chassis, the Survivor R features a steel armour cab. Designed for a top speed of 100 km/h, this high-mobility vehicle combines tried-and-tested automotive engineering with state-of-the-art protection technology from Rheinmetall.

Depending on the given threat level, the armoured monocoque body can be individually and discretely equipped with add-on armour elements, while the air filtration system – a standard feature – provides reliable protection from nuclear, biological and chemical agents. Despite its excellent survivability, the vehicle's outer appearance is unthreatening and deescalating, making it ideal for law enforcement operations. The interior is well lit, ergonomically designed, easy to clean and roomy enough carry up to ten people with their personal kit as well as a full panoply of communication and command and control equipment. Systematic use of serially produced, standard commercial and military components has resulted in a reasonably priced vehicle – one which benefits from Rheinmetall MAN's global service network, assuring efficient maintenance and repairs worldwide. This makes the Survivor R a cost-effective, easy-to-maintain vehicle platform with low lifecycle costs and outstanding operational readiness.
